

For the first two years or so, I thought it was all coming from outside of me. Gradually, I became resigned to accepting it, recognizing that it came from within me, was maybe a response to the noisy environment that I live in, and to my going into old age. No amount of reasoning about it will do away with it. When I am with my Recovery group, this thinking is not there--I resume normal thinking.